Disaster strikes a wagon train en route to Texas, leaving 18-year-old Abby in charge of the survivors, all children younger than her. After an attempted kidnaping, the others convince her to disguise herself as a boy. Initially reluctant, Abby soon realizes life on the trail is much easier without bulky skirts. The disguise allows her to do things as "Abner" she couldn't do as Abby. It's intoxicating.

Disfigured by fire as a child, Manny, a young cowboy, is lonely and yearns for companionship. His scars and the judgment of townspeople make it difficult for him to trust others. He intercepts the wagon train and agrees to help the children finish the trip to San Antonio. A new friendship cracks the protective walls built around his heart. Hope blooms when he meets "Abner," and Manny's fear of rejection slowly dissolves.

When you hear the words "prophecy," "prophet," or "prophetess," what do you think of? Psychic? New Age? Woo-woo or "out there"? Some people think prophecy is strange or even downright demonic. Prophecy is a beautiful, precious gift from God. We see its proper use in the Old and New Testaments and exemplified perfectly through the life of Jesus Christ. Prophecy is the testimony of Jesus Christ (Revelation 19:10), and it should always point to Jesus and glorify Him.

Certain scholars and a Messianic Rabbi Jonathan Cahn believe Jesus' birth happened at one of two possible High holiday feasts based on what the scriptures say.
